

Howzat for Shane's new crowning glory?

laser therapy

HAMPSHIRE cricket skipper Shane Warne has revealed the secret behind his trademark blond locks – he has undergone a cutting-edge treatment for hair loss.

Tired of being taunted by teammates, the legendary spin bowler decided to take drastic action.

Now after a three-month intensive programme Warne claims his new-look appearance has even improved his cricket.

The 35-year-old was so impressed with the results that he has agreed to promote the programme by Advanced Hair Studio and will star in a series of TV commercials advertising the treatment.

He will also tour England next week to field questions and show off the results of the new advanced laser therapy programme which does not involve implants but "regrows" the hair that has fallen out.

Warne, who did not feature in last night's Twenty20 match between England and Australia at Hampshire's Rose Bowl ground, said: "I was getting some comments on the pitch. My teammates were saying that I had a thinning thatch on my head. I am delighted now that my own hair has grown back. When I catch sight of myself in the shop window now I believe I am looking younger. My wife loves it too."

He said he was looking forward to the banter with the crowds during the upcoming Ashes tour with the Australian cricket team.

England thrash the old enemy – see sport